FOUR CORNERS MONUMENT NAVAJO TRIBAL PARK

The Navajo Nation welcomes you to one of its most unique landmarks. The only place in the United States where four states intersect at one point. Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado. Landmark surrounded on Navajo Nation and Ute Mountain Ute Tribal lands.

The Original marker erected in 1912 was a simple cement pad, but has since been redone in granite and brass.

A small metal and cement marker was installed in 1912, and the area remained simple and unremarkable till 1992, when a flat granite slab with an aluminum/bronze marker was installed. An inscription on the granite monument reads, 'Four states here meet in freedom under God'. The plaza is surrounded by the flags and seals of all four states, along with the Navajo Nation and Ute Mountain Ute flags.

People visiting the monument either leave excited by running from state to state and taking photographs. The Four Corners monument is a very limited attraction, and is plainly a cartographic curiosity, which allows a person to be in four places simultaneously. So, it is highly recommended that you add other Tribal Park such as the Monument Valley, Little Colorado River or Lake Powell Tribal Park to view the spectacular Slot Canyons to your trip's itinerary.

"FOUR STATES MEET HERE IN FREEDOM UNDER GOD"

Weather of Four Corners

The best time to travel to the Four Corners area is between the months of October and May. Temperatures can reach as high as 110°F (43°C) in the summer, and therefore, it is important that one carries sunscreen, sanitizers, and lots of water to drink, to counter the natural elements.

The high heat of the summer can make the metal in the park too hot to touch, including the bronze surveyor mark on the monument.

The monument is open throughout the year (except for Thanksgiving, day, after thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's Day), demonstrations are done by Navajo artisans, where you can learn about their culture and way of life.

Navajo vendors sell a wide variety of handcrafts, jewelry, and traditional foods near the center. One can buy Native American dreamcatchers, Kachina dolls, Navajo rugs, pottery, jewelry, and other pieces of traditional art from here.

Visitors get on their hands and knees so that each limb is in one of the four corner states at the same time. There is also a platform where someone else can take your photograph as you touch the four states. As there might be many people who want to do this, be patient and await your turn. Respect the Dine' (Di neeh), their land, their rules and regulations. Do not litter, and ask for permission before photographing the natives. Give them the same courtesy and respect that you wish to receive.

The entry fee for the park is USD 8.00 per person, and the park hours vary depending on the season you visit. However, it is important that you do not enter the park after closing time, as you might encounter untied dogs or wild animals who might get aggressive.

Navajo Nation has an executive order for wearing a mask, while visiting the Navajo Nation Public Health Order No. 2021-016.
